Atherosclerosis is responsible for the majority of deaths in developed countries.

DESCRIPTION

Hypercholesterolemia (elevated blood cholesterol levels above the range of values considered ideal or optimal) is a risk factor for suffering from cardiovascular diseases (coronary heart disease, stroke or peripheral artery disease). This happens more and more. It is at an early age and is complicated for people with diabetes or obesity. Monacolin K inhibits an enzyme that controls cholesterol production in the liver, contributing to the maintenance of normal blood cholesterol levels.
