Food supplement with essential oil of Oregano, Thyme and Savory

DESCRIPTION

Oregano essential oil, moderately dense, with a very pronounced smell of the mother plant, somewhat bitter, quite acrid but not unpleasant, contains mainly carvacrol, thymol, terpinene, pinene, limonene, cymene. It is recognized for its analgesic, antidiarrheal, antiseptic, balsamic, carminative, general stimulant, nerve stimulant, general tonic, expectorant and cough-relief properties.

Thyme essence contains mainly the two monoterpenes thymol (30-70%) and carvacrol (3-15%); in addition to small amounts of p-cymene, camphene and limonene. In pharmacopoeias and traditional medicine systems, the use of thyme essence is described, with particular indication in the treatment of gastrointestinal disorders, dyspepsia as a digestive stimulant, choleric and diuretic.

Thyme essential oil also has a great and powerful antiseptic and antibacterial action, for which thymol is responsible, which is why it is also appreciated as a cough fume and respiratory tract disinfectant.

Satureja essential oil contains numerous phytochemical substances, the most important of which are: carvacrol, terpinene, cymene, thujene, pinene, linalool, terpineol and terpineol, cineole, camphor, thymol and caryophyllum.
