Thyme Food Supplement, promotes the fluidity of bronchial secretions.

DESCRIPTION

The flowering plant is used for its preparation. The essential oil contained in it has antibacterial properties that have been well demonstrated in vitro, especially against aerobic coccus gram+, mainly due to phenols, in particular limon and cavacrol.

This action is essentially bactericidal, especially in concentrations higher. It has a spasmolytic action on the smooth muscles of the digestive tract. In high doses, it can cause nausea, vomiting, bradycardia, asthenia, labored breathing and hypothermia. These symptoms disappear when the therapy is discontinued. Administer with caution in patients suffering from hypothyroidism or on antithyroid drug therapy.

Other constituents are tannins, flavonoids and triterpenes. It also has expectorant and secretomotor properties.

Ingredients: Water, alcohol, Thyme (Thymus vulgaris L.) leaves 20%, honey.
