Red vine dietary supplement, promotes regular cardiovascular function.

DESCRIPTION

In autumn, when the leaves of the vines begin to change colour, a red active substance rich in anthocyanins is produced, which provides valuable help in cases of blood flow disorders. First of all, red vine is used against circulatory problems, leg fatigue, venous stasis and varicose veins.

Red vine can help to eliminate rosacea, redness in the areas of the nose, cheeks, chin and forehead (causes of poor blood flow). In addition, the leaves of this plant, rich in tannins of the same type as vitamin P, act against the oxidising substances that affect vascular walls, favouring inflammation and oedema. It is traditionally used in cases of venous circulation disorders (varicose veins, phlebitis...), circulatory problems of menopause and puberty, pelvic congestion (haemorrhoids, prostate) and even for diarrhoea and dysentery.

The main active constituents are: polyphenols, anthocyanosides, mineral salts, organic acids, tannins. In modern phytotherapy, extracts obtained from the plant's peel and seeds are used, titrated in procyanidins and resveratrol, used in cardiovascular pathologies (ischemic lesions, hypertension, venous insufficiency). It is useful for the prevention of chronic degenerative diseases.

Ingredients: Water, alcohol, Red vine (Vitis vinifera L.) leaves 20%, honey.
