HIPP: It is organic food for the baby. We are talking about a group of human beings (babies) with very sensitive digestive systems. The food must be carefully chosen for them, babies need healthy food that tastes good and does not have unwanted ingredients. HiPP realized this need over fifty years ago and has been producing the highest quality BIO baby food ever since. The soils in which the fruits and vegetables are grown are carefully selected, the seeds are not treated and the fruits and vegetables naturally ripen and develop their flavour. The BIO meat used in HiPP's menus is produced with the same care and attention.

DESCRIPTION

HiPP organic quality

260 checks for your peace of mind HiPP has implemented rigorous, accurate and reliable checks on its BIO seal to ensure the safety of baby food. Each jar passes up to 260 verifications (also from independent institutes) to ensure that it meets BIO quality standards. HiPP exceeds international legal requirements for organic farming on all crops, from grains to peas, milk and apples. HiPP experts work closely with BIO farms, from the selection of soil and seeds to the delivery of the final products. Only when laboratory tests confirm the quality of the product, its processing is allowed. This results in high-quality BIO baby food, subject to rigorous residue controls. Claus HiPP offers his personal guarantee in his BIO seal and these rigorous controls allow parents to trust his promise unconditionally.

Each jar is rigorously inspected by a quality control system consisting of more than 260 checks, ranging from soil and raw material analysis to final product evaluation. The HIPP team inspects the raw materials immediately after delivery and if any problems are detected, they are rejected.

Hipp's BIO vegetables grow in the middle of nature

In HiPP, chemical and synthetic insecticides are prohibited and traditional methods such as mechanical or hand tools are used to control weeds. Plants are also grown at the edges of the field to attract vermin and protect useful plants. Instead of using artificial fertilisers, stone dust is applied to strengthen the plants and lock in moisture, although this may result in less cultivation. Carrots are grown outdoors to allow the wind to naturally clean the plantation of fungus and parasites. Growing organically and biologically requires more effort, but at HiPP we do it with pleasure.

HiPP BIO fruits: the best for your baby

Hipp's organic fruits come from carefully selected growing areas and are subject to rigorous inspections from blossom to harvest. They ripen without the help of chemicals and only phytosanitary protection is carried out according to the legal standards of organic agriculture. Hipp fights parasites in a natural way, for example, by protecting and promoting their natural enemies, such as birds and ladybugs. To prevent fungal infestation, we apply herbal extracts. All these methods demonstrate his philosophy of preferring nature instead of chemicals.

What is the origin of the BIO milk used in HiPP BIO dairy foods?

HiPP only uses milk from farms that strictly adhere to organic farming standards. The cows are cared for and live in an environment suitable for their species, grazing on natural pastures without the use of mineral fertilizers or chemical or synthetic insecticides.

The natural diet of the animals, made up of grass, hay or cereals, ensures the highest quality BIO milk, full of healthy nutrients. This is what makes BIO milk a valuable ingredient for HiPP dairy products.

HiPP BIO bananas, completely natural... from the plant to the jar

For several decades, Hipp has been buying organic plantains in Costa Rica. These are grown naturally in the rainforest in numerous small plots, thus helping to prevent deforestation. This is a significant commitment to benefit the environment and humanity.
