Colamag, massage gel. Straight to the point of pain.

DESCRIPTION

The most common arthropathy in the general population is osteoarthritis; more than 70% of people over 50 years of age have radiological signs of osteoarthritis in some location.

This chronic problem initially affects the joint cartilage, which degenerates and is destroyed, causing pain, joint stiffness and inflammation.

As for mild and acute problems of the musculoskeletal system, those related to sport must be taken into account due to their high frequency: joint, muscle and tendon overloads; mild inflammation of these structures, sprains, bruises, etc. Problems that mainly involve pain and inflammation.
