What are the ingredients of Weleda Birch Oil?

- Apricot kernel oil
- jojoba oil
- wheat germ oil
- natural essential oils
- Birch leaf extract: Birch is a plant whose fine and delicate leaves contain flavonoids and tannins, compounds that have the ability to activate the skin's metabolism and stimulate the drainage of fluids from the body. These extracts are highly valued in cosmetics thanks to their ability to soften the skin and strengthen connective tissue. For this reason, they are used in making massage oils and other skin care products. Discover how the benefits of nature can improve the health and appearance of your skin with our product that contains birch extracts.
- butcher's broom root extract
- rosemary leaf extract
- linalool
- Citronellol
- Citral

Council in pregnancy

If you are pregnant, we want you to know that all of our products are safe for you and your baby. However, there is an exception: Birch Juice is not recommended during pregnancy due to its draining properties. In our opinion, detox juices are not advisable during this period, as they can interfere with the natural processes of the woman's body during pregnancy. As for the birch body oil, you can use it without problems during pregnancy and lactation. Of course, we recommend applying it by massaging gently with your hands in the buttocks area and avoiding the abdomen. We want you to enjoy our products without worries and always taking care of yourself and your baby.
