What are the ingredients of Calendula Massage Oil?

- Sunflower oil
- birch leaf extract
- Calendula extract: The extracts obtained from the flowering aerial part of the marigold plants have a hue that varies between yellow-green and brown-green. This coloration is due to the presence of various compounds such as carotenoids, flavonoids and saponins. Thanks to the combination of these compounds, calendula extracts have softening properties that help soothe and care for the skin. In addition, they also promote skin regeneration, which makes them a very valuable ingredient in the formulation of personal care products.
- Chamomile flower extract
- natural essential oils
- limonene
- linalool
- itronellol
- atural essential oils
- Citral

How should Calendula Massage Oil be used?

You can apply the product to the skin after a shower or bath, while it is still slightly damp to facilitate its absorption. Then, with gentle massage movements, distribute the product throughout the area to be treated until it has been completely absorbed.
